The Slave Case-Two Sermons on the subject by Rev. J. Pierpont.
Correspondence of The Tribune.

BOSTON, Nov. 7, 1842 The case of George Latimer, the fugitive slave continues to excite a very deep and absorbing interest and sympathy in this community. It is not only a topic of conversation in the streets, shops and stores, and in numerous Social circles, but is subject of thought and excitement in many religious congregations. Nor is the excitement by any means confined to the city, but extends "into all the region round about." In two places, Lynn and Hingham, large public meetings have been held and resolutions passed of the most stirring and indignant character. On Saturday last it was expected the case would be decided by Judge Story and multitudes came in from the country to wit ness the result. The sickness of the Judge was assigned as the cause of an adjournment till today, (Monday,) and before I close this letter I may, perhaps, be able to inform you of the fate of the unfortunate man.

His master has been heard to boast (so it is stated on good authority) that he cares very little for the pecuaiary value of his human chattel, his principal object in attempting his recapture being to get him once more in his power, in order to make him an example by severe punishment. His wife, who ran away with him, is near confinement, and awaiting with an agonized heart, the sentence that must either deprive her for ever of her husband by sending him back to the bondage from which they both escaped, or confirm his freedom by the strong bonds of the law. Is it to be wondered at, that under such circumstances the sympathies of humane people are aroused, and that multitudes who would not on any pretence interfere with slavery on its own territory, are shocked that the soil of the Pilgrims should become the hunting-ground of the master, and that, within sight of Bunker Hill, and in the very cradle of the Revolution, a man whose complexion is nearly white, and who has shown himself worthy of freedom by the simple fact that he has peaceably obtained it, should be seized with out any of the forms of law, and thrown into jai for no crime but that of loving Liberty better that

But it is said that the Constitution of the United States allows such proceedings, and binds the people of the North to an unresisting acquiescence. If this is so, can it be said with truth, shall we any longer dare to say, that the North has nothing to do with slavery? But it is not my intention to argue the point, though to deny that my feelings are deeply moved by it would be to acknowledge myself wanting in the common sympathies of our nature and devoid of the noblest attributes of humanity. I took my pen simply to give you some account of two sermons preached yesterday by Mr Pierpont in his Church, with special reference to this subject. The opinions of a man so distinguished for his talents and philanthropy, and no less revered by all who know him for the virtuewhich adorn his character, will command attention and respect, even where his arguments fail to convince the understanding and judgement of his Mr. Pierpont took for his text the words it which Matthew records the covenant between the Jews and the traitor Judas: " And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver." I was not his object, he said, to excite their indignation by dwelling upon the guilt of Judas in be traying his Lord, or on that of the Jews in putting him to death. These were common themes. He proposed to consider the general question of The binding force and obligation of oaths and promises to do that which is a violation of the law of God, or morally wrong. He deemed this a peculiarly fitting occasion for the discussion of this question, when it is proposed to send back to chains and slavery an innocent man, and when the only plea by which it is attempted to justify the deed is, that we have promised to do it, and therefore cannot go back. The essential morality of this case was the same with that in the one referred to in the text. It was for thirty pieces of silver that Judas covenanted to betray the life of his Divine Master; it was for a similar, though perhaps a more tempting consideration, that a promise had been made to betray the liberty of innecent men. The right to life is inalienable, and the right to liberty not less so; therefore the es sential morality of the two covenants was the same. He deemed no rites too sacred, (it was communion day,) no day too holy to discuss this great question; and he regarded it as the special duty of the minister of Christ to lift up his voice againwrong-to plead the cause of the down-trodder and the oppressed. The idea seems to have prevailed in all ages that vows or oaths, uttered under solema forms. impose extraordinary obligation, and cannot be violated without incurring guilt of peculiar enor mity. When the reader of Sacred History findits written, "Thou shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths," and many other similar declarations, he will not wonder that the question which we propose to consider has occasioned some embar rassment. The case of Jeptha, of the Jews in the time of Jeremiah, of Herod and of these who banded together to slay Paul, all suggest questionwhich it had been found difficult to settle. Of al the forms under which men have bound them selves, an oath is the most imposing and solema If, therefore, we can settle the question before u as it respects this form of obligation, we shall vir tually determine the whole matter. We may de fine our oath to be, a promise, made under the sanctions of Religion, to do or not to do a partic ular act; and its binding force will depend gene rally upon the question whether it is consisten with the anterior relations arising from our relations to God and our fellow men. There are cer tain relations in which we are placed without the exercise of our own choice, by the act of our Creator, and the obligations arising from these are bind ing upon us independently of any promise on ou part to observe them; and no promise can absolve us from the duty of obeying them, or bind us to de any thing contrary to their requirements. Such are the filial and paternal relations. The child i bound to obey the parent in all cases where the latter has authority to give law: can his promise of obedience add any force to the pre-existing obligation? Certainly not Can his promise to dis regard his filial duties absolve him from his obli gations? Clearly not. A promise to do right, or to abstain from wrong, may be useful as a means of strengthening a virtuous purpose, but it can never in itself be the ground of obligation. There are relations, also, which are voluntary on our part; but when we have once entered upon them. no promise can absolve us from the obligation to fulfil the duries which spring from them. Such are the conjugal and parental relations. Above all these is our relation to the Great Author of our being, which is not a matter of choice on our part, but absolute, and from which arise obligations and duties which no promise or oath can render more sacred. We owe to him gratitude, allegiance and unreserved obedience. Can we, by lifting our weak hands at the horns of the altar, increase or annul our obligations? Certainly not. There are duties, also, which we owe to ourselves, from which no oath can absolve us, and which no promise can make more sacred. We are bound absolutely to keep ourselves pure and hely, and the obligation is not of our assuming. No vew can draw closer the cord which binds us to this duty. It has been adjusted by an Almighty hand, truly as the cord by which the planets are wheeled around their common centre.

and placed beyond the reach of the human arm, as that no oath, covenant, compact or agreement, un der whatever circumstances made, which requires us to violate the law of God, or do anything contrary to fundamental morality, can be binding. All such oaths, covenants and compacts are not violable, but void, ab initio; and they must be disregarded on pain of the Divine displeasure. They are in themselves a sin, and to perform them would only add to the guilt of their inception. Having labored in his forenoon discourse to es ablish this general principle, he proceeded in the afternoon to apply it to several cases in sacred history, but particularly to the supposed compact found in the Constitution of the United States for the restoration of fugitive slaves. Suppose, said he, that I am a Judge, and a slaveholder comes pefore me with his victim, demanding authority to carry him from that to a slave State. He bases his claim upon that clause of the Constitution which declares that "No person owing service or labor in one State, under the laws thereof, escaping to another State, shall, in coasequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be What shall I do? Am I bound, under this clause, to send a fellow-man into slavery? Suppose there were no such institution as slavery in our country, are there any cases to which this clause might be legitimately applied? It might, he thought, be applied to the case of a minor, who had escaped from his parent or guardian, and to the indented apprentice. These might be said, in a rightful sense, to "owe service or labor." But can it apply to the slave, who owes his master nothing, but to whom the master is indebted, perbaps, for the severe toil of a wearisome life? He thought not, and he must therefore disallow the master's claim, on the ground that a slave could not, in any legitimate sense of the word, " owe his master either " service or labor."

But, it will be asked, do you not know that the clause in question was intended to be applied to the case of fugitives from slavery? Ave, said he I know it too well; but I also know that such a ovenant is contrary to natural right, contrary therefore, to the paramount law of God, and in derogation of fundamental morality. It is, therefore, to be disregarded. It is as if it were not --It can no more bind us than a promise to assassinate a fellow man, for liberty is inalienable as life. I will not say which of these gifts of God is most valuable; but one who stood in the front rank in our Revolutionary struggle said, "Give me liberty, or give me death!" In contending, said Mr. P. hat this compact, if it means what it is said to mean, is null and void, I do not speak without bcok; and then, taking up Blackstone, he read passages asserting the principle for which he contended in the strongest terms, viz. that all human constitutions, compacts and laws, which contrarene the law of God, are to be disregarded and rodden under foot as unholy and impious. As a Judge, therefore, he should feel himself bound to deny the slaveholder's claim. But, even if this ground were not tenable, said Mr. P., there would still be another way to escape the dreadful guilt of sending an innecent man into slavery. I could esign my office rather than do so foul a deed, and my allegiance to God as well as my obligations to my fellow man would require me to do this, it here were no other way to avoid such an act.

I know, said Mr. P., that this is strange doc rine in the ears of many. The idea is too prevalent among us that the Constitution is of higher authority than the eternal law of God; that its provisions can override all the great principles on which the instrument itself is based. Providence s now bringing the question distinctly before us, whether we will regard his law or the law of man of paramount obligation; whether we will obey he dead fathers or THE LIVING GOD.

Such is a very meagre and imperfect sketch of hese extraordinary discourses, which can hardly fail to produce a strong sensation here, and indeed throughout the country. I understand they will be given to the public immediately through the REVILO.

STOVES.

NTOTT'S STOVES .- We invite the attention of the public to sur new and splendid assort-ment of Nott's Stoves. The first premium has again been awarded them as the best heat Stoves for Halls, Churches, Public Buildings, &c. at the late fair of the American Idsti-tute. They have for years stood unrivalled as regards their utility and economy, and the decision of the Judges, as well as the increasing demand for the article, is confirmation strong of their superiority at the present time over any other Stove before the public. Our patterns are rich and varied, commanding the admiration of all observers. Our style for private houses is an ornament to the hall as well as a most useful appendage. An entire house of any sign can be thoroughly warmed by a single Stove, without recourse at all to the parior grates during the winter.

We have also been able to complete a few of "Shepard's

MPORTANT INVENTION — Elsewhere Recollect the partners of the companies of the c and isflammation was so great that a change in the weather and inflammation was so great that a change in the wanner, or a walk, or any little exertion, would lay me up, and the usual routine of fasting, purging and blistering had to be resorted to. This I has four times in the course of two months, and then speaking aloud or reading aloud made me a great deal worse, and my strength was so far gone that any little exertion in walking or working was quite sufficient for me. Now look at the change! Before I had taken two small boxes of the Pills, my strength was so far recovery that I commenced to work ten hours a day, and scarcely ever left wearied, and have done so for these five weeks past; and then as to there being a preventive against cold, I may just mention that the place I went to work in was a school-house, just building; the roof was on it, but as yet there were none of the windows in it, and the draught was very great, more especially as I had never before wrongly under such circumstances; yet I wrought, and am was very great, more especially as I had never before wrought under such circumstances; yet I wrought, and am still working there without having taken c-id that way.

"When I began to take Parr's Fills, I gave up at the same time the use of tea and coffee, which I believe helped me greatly in getting rid of my complaint. I am fully satisfied the use of tea, especially, is a very bad toing for a cought, as I always found my cough much worse after taking tea.

The great good that I have derived from Parr's Pills may be suggest up in a few words:

be summed up in a few words:

"First, they increased my strength; all other medicines had a weakening effect upon me but them. I take three, four, and semetimes five pills every twenty-four bours, and four, and sometimes five pills every twenty-four hours, and instead of being weakened by them, they rather in their operation revive the animal spirits and impart lasting strength to the body.

"Secondly, they go direct to the cough. I had not taken six Pills before I left the cough shaking; its hold upon me became looser and looser every dose I took, and the first, or it may be the second. Sunday after I had begun taking them, my friends were remarking to me the great and happy change in my cough, as during the meeting I had scarcely coughed any, while previous to taking them! carcely coughed any, while previous to taking them I sed to be the great disturber of the meetings by my com-

"Thirdly, they healed the spitting of blood, and changed completely the nature of the expectoration. This was previously so bad that the doctors agreed from this that my lungs were diseased; and the last advice I got from the doctor was, 'You must take great care of yourself, for your lungs are affected.' Now, whether my lungs are affected or not, I do not pretend to judge, but this I say, that by the use of Parr's Life Pills these two bad symptoms are removed.
"Fourthly, they (Parr's Pills) have restored my voice to moved.

"Fourthly, they (Carr's Pills) have restored my voice to its natural tone and strength. This all my friends were remarking who heard me speak in the meeting the other day, and who previously had noticed the weakness of my voice.

"Fithly, by the use of Parr's Pills my natural color is restored. Before taking them my eyes were languid and dulf, my color was low and deathlike, so much so that a lady told me last week that when she saw me about three months ago she really had little or no hopes of my recovery; whereas now my color is healthy, my eyes bright, and the same lady says I am now beginning to get flesh on my face, the cheeks of which were greatly sunk.

"My dear Mr. Nothe, I am afraid you will be fired reading this long letter. Other particulars I might mention, but will finish by expressing my beartfelt thanks to the Propietors of Parr's Life Pills, as to them under God I owe the greatest blessing but one—bodily health, the one blessing, which no medicine can bring, I trust you are continually enjoying—health to the sout, to be found only in the light of His aonatenance whose loving kindness is better than life. I remain most affectionately yours, not in Perrer Somerville."

READ THIS.—Having been afflicted for the last 10 or 12 years with a complication of diseases which confined me to my house and bed a great portion of the time, my stomach extremely weak and sore, via lent pains in my side, my strength exhausted, and, in fact reduced to such a degree that life seemed to be nearly ex-tinct. I was invited by Dr. Starkweather, and by his advice linet. I was invited by Dr. Starkweather, and by his advice commenced the use of his medicines—but was so weak and debilitated that I could take but half the usual dose of the Hepatic Elixir. I had taken so much medicine previously that I had no faith or confidence in any thing that bore the name of medicine. However, I continued the use of the Hepatic Elixir, in half doses, for one week, when I began to feel its beneficial effects; I was then directed to increase the dose, which I found I could easily bear, and to the utter astonishment of myself and triends, I was soon able to leave my hed, and in a lew weeks was able to ride 50 miles in one my bed, and in a lew weeks was able to ride 30 miles in one day, which I could not have done before at any time in ten years past. I can now do my work about house, and feel perfectly well. I leel truly grateful to the Doctor, for his prescriptions, and sincerely believe the use of his Elixir has resorted me to health, and I can do no less than to earnestly entreat all who are suffering with bilious diseases to go and do likewise, and they may rest assured that they will derive as much benefit from it as I have done. I believe Dr Starkweather's Hepatic Elixer to be a truly valuable medicine.
